D-Grade Final

Tee Off—8:45am

Allen Meyer

Vs

Ant Mathy

Ranking: 2 Right-Handed
Handicap: 23.5 Odds: $1.90

Ranking: 1 Right Handed
Handicap: 23.6 Odds: $1.90

Preview

The D-Grade has once again tossed up an absorbing contest with both players showing more up and down form than a Malaysian airlines flight, and it will depend a little on who settles first. Glencoe vs Tarpeena will trigger rivalries of old. Meyer is a previous winner and has what it takes to get over the line. Mathys has also been runner up and is keen to add a championship to his trophy cabinet. As work mates, Timberlink will be holding a woodchip-tape parade at Friday lunchtime to introduce the two combatants, which will probably increase productivity the plant. It will be a contrasting game as Meyer's patented Driver—Driver-Putter—Putter-Putter™ game will be solid, whilst Mathys is certainly finding more length off the tee and will attack the flag. With no confusing scoring systems or handicaps, Mathys should be able to keep it simple, giving him the best chance. Meyer will be hoping he cleans up more than the kitchen and is certainly not without a chance in this even contest. Harder to pick than Hutchy's nose.

Editor's tip: Mathys 2/1

Open Final

Tee Off—9:30am

Ian 'Jock' Agnew

Vs Leo Price

Ranking: 2 Right-Handed
Handicap: 4.9 Odds: $1.25

Ranking: 1 Right Handed
Handicap: 8.8 Odds: $4.00

Preview

The beauty of Jock making the final three years in a row is that I don't have to change the photo, although being a robot, he never ages anyway. Agnew is shooting for his 7th title, and amazingly against his 7th different opponent. Once again, Agnew comes into the clash ranked the second qualifier, but we know what happened to the number qualifier last year in the modified 27 hole contest. Leo Price is a super match play player, and like most of us with our partners, in match play he punches well above his weight. He can sink putts easier than tazering a houso. Agnew would have to start favourite over 36 holes with his consistency. Price does play a lot of golf and has nothing to lose. He had two good wins in the finals and his form is not far away from his best. Agnew is also near best form and a recent software upgrade to IOS 8.1 will see him start as favourite. However, if he wins, fair chance a 'random' breathalys-er will be set up right on Agnew Road. Will be an entertaining contest.

B-Grade Final

Tee Off—9:15am

Curt Evans

Vs

Paul Harmer

Ranking: 4 Right-Handed
Handicap: 16.3 Odds: $1.80

Ranking: 2 Right Handed
Handicap: 16.9 Odds: $2.00

Preview

Curt Evans has certainly snuck under the radar as a player who is a serious contender for the final. The journeyman has snuck away for many a round whilst wife Sam was expecting, and is still fortunate enough to be enjoying plenty of golf, post birth. He has cleaned up the Saturday competitions in the past few months, and after taking 19 holes to get over Tony Gleeson, he surprisingly accounted for club legend, Peter Walker, very easily. Harmer, on the other hand, had to do it tough over Senior and Lofty to scrape through to the final, and there still may be a few form issues. However, the purchase of the 'magic stick' has traditionalists scrambling for the rule books, but it could be an advantage come Sunday. Both players have temperaments that could be tested. Evans famous for the burning bag incident and Harmer ensuring no snakes will come within 100 metres, it could be the game the crowd comes to watch. Evans will be confident, Harmer will be chaffing, will go down to the wire.

Editor's tip: Evans 3/2

C-Grade Final

Tee Off—9:00am

Pete Bullock

Vs

Shane McPherson

Ranking: 1 Right-Handed
Handicap: 17.6 Odds: $1.40

Ranking: 3 Right Handed
Handicap: 20.1 Odds: $3.00

Preview

From turning up to twilight golf, to a serious championship contender, Pete Bullock has come back to golf in a big way. Already a Pennant winner, he only needs this win to cap off an amazing year. He started by cashing in the old wooden clubs, and we are not talking about just the woods, for a new set and has never looked back. Shane McPherson is always around the mark, but winning IGA store of the year for the 135th year running meant that he has missed many a championship whilst chucking hot laps around the Abu Dhabi GP circuit. At a slower pace, due to incessant talking and amusing jokes, McPherson is at his best. Although with his shoulder dodgier than marked down IGA seafood, Bullock could be poised to pounce. Whatever the result, Bullock will be found in the POW front bar with a smile after the match. Pretty sure it will be a winning smile. Editor's tip: Bullock 5/4
